SCHOOL REPORT.

The Board of Education present the following report of the schools for the past year :

In the summer, we had four schools of six weeks each, and the Smith children were taught by Miss Augusta Colby at her home. In these schools were all the scholars that would attend school in summer, excepting those in Loverin, Kempton and Fowler Town schools ; they had one long fall term instead of the two terms that the other scholars had.

We endeavored to equalize the school privileges among the scholars as nearly as possible ; but two of our fall schools were closed by the teachers without notice to us ; one teacher, on account of a severe cold and cold weather, combined with the dilapidated schoolhouse, discouraged the other teacher. The two largest schools were then given an additional week.

During the year we have had 107 2-5 weeks of school. While we decide that "absolute equality of privilege is an impossibility", yet when we compare the amount of school money and schooling for each scholar this year with the year 1880, we think there has been a decided improvement in equalizing school privileges.

In 1880 and 1881 the town raised $100 in addition to that required by law ; in 1884, $50, and in 1882, 1883 and 1885, $25 each year. Since then not any money has been raised, either for schools or repairs.

This year the whole number of scholars attending school over two weeks has been 112, making the average sum expended for each scholar $4.12. The improvement made by these scholars has been creditable both to themselves and their teachers, with but few exceptions.

Our largest schools have been our best ones ; it seems to be impossible to awaken that interest in study and recitation when a scholar is to read or recite alone as when in a class, even though the teacher may have as good, or even better, methods of teaching. On account of uniformity in text books and a proper supply of the same, this year, our schools have been classed more satisfactorily.

While we might mention the efforts and successes of each teacher, we will only call attention to those whose pupils made the most improvement. While none of our teachers made a specialty of any one branch to the neglect of others, the scholars under Mrs. Bailey's instruction made the greatest improvement in writing; and Miss Riley of Orford succeeded in awakening an interest and enthusiasm in reading. Commendable improvement was made in all the schools using grammar, but a class of young scholars commencing the Graded Lessons in English, taught by Miss Fenton of Andover, seemed to exhibit more interest in their work than other and older pupils. The closing examination conducted by Miss Wellman of Cornish gave proof of thoroughness and advancement in all the different studies.

We notice that those pupils having the same teacher for two or more terms make the best progress. A teacher adapted to the needs of a school ought to be retained; but as we have only one or two terms in a year, we have found this very difficult with the means at our disposal; because those making teaching a business want three terms in a year, and can have them by going elsewhere.

In conclusion, let us hope that the harmony which has existed between our teachers and scholars during the past year may continue, and that our teachers will endeavor to train the minds of the young in such a manner as will fit them for the responsible duties of their maturer years.
